What Kind of Plant Do You Want?

Objective Structured Clinical Examination (OSCE) can be used to determine whether participants have learned the essential steps to feeding a baby correctly. They can be used to verify that a participant knows enough to care for the course, an alternative method repeated regularly for you too. After repeatedly such completed evaluation should be used as an opportunity for the participant to review and learn.

Read the case scenario about the participant. Provide the program stream to read. Indicate the baby's response to the participant's action using the manual simulator or words. Analyze responses. For example when the participant initiates crying, show that the baby is not crying with a simulator. Say that the baby is not crying if using a simulator. It provides the participant with "The Baby: There's" or "The Care" for each activity. After completing these prompts, keep silent during the evaluation. After participants complete the OSCE, and the 1 question another below OSCE. These questions will help the participants reflect on other actions they took and whether they can do better the next time. Participants who can recognize that common mistakes will better remember the right steps to take the next time. Comment on the participant's performance only after the end of the case, after the feedback and the 1 question.

Instructions to the facilitator: Read the below instructions for the case scenario.

Helping Babies Breathe

Prepare for birth*
See HMS Action Plans for mother

How do newborns know how to breathe. How to take care baby breath. How to tell if baby is practicing breathing. What is helping babies breathe.

Here are a few phrases to use as a starting point: Wishing health, love and joy to you and your new arrival. Get the chores out of the way so they can spend more time doing what they actually want to do: paying attention to their bundle of joy. Long Distance HelpIf you don't live close enough to drop off food or assist with household chores but still want to help, consider a gift that will make the lives of new parents easier. When you receive your results, you'll see each registry the parents created at each store. My RegistryMy Registry is a site dedicated to helping you find baby and wedding registries along with wish lists for other occasions. They include Target, Walmart, Pottery Barn Kids, Amazon, Crate and Barrel, BuyBuyBaby and several other stores that sell baby goods. Many of these big box stores have kiosks where you can search for registries and print them out. The same rule applies when visiting new parents. If you see a sink full of dishes, go ahead and take care of them. Additionally, many moms crave sweet and citrus fruit flavors while breastfeeding—fruit juice is a great way to satisfy that craving and stay hydrated. Help Out Around the HouseOne of the most valuable things you can give a new parent is more time with their baby. You can search for registries by entering one of the new parents' names, or you can perform an advanced search and add more identifying information, like the relevant city, state or country. Ask them if they need anything from the store when you're there, or offer to make a grocery trip for them. But with so many options for baby registries available these days, there are several ways to find the one you need. Baby ListMost of the time, when you receive a baby shower invitation, the hosts provide a link to the new parents' registry. Congrats on the arrival of your new family member. When choosing a card and writing your message, consider how close you are with the new parent or parents. Moms are often hungry while breastfeeding. Does considering what to write in a new baby card make you tongue tied? You can also take a few minutes and search some of the popular stores for baby registries. Visit the StoreIf you can't find what you're looking for online, you may find it by actually visiting the store. Thinking of you during this exciting time! Wishing you and your new baby many years of health, happiness, and love. Food is one of the most practically useful things you can bring a new parent. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET iStock The arrival of a new baby is one of life's most joyful moments. We've got you covered with card inspiration, useful gift ideas, and a few additional tips to support and celebrate the new parents in your life. Send a Thoughtful CardA card is a great way to let new parents know you're thinking about them. The site has a baby registry finder that allows you to enter one of the future parents' names, and it can then help you find their registry as long as they're registered at a shop from a specific selection of stores. Instead of offering up a vague "Let me know if there's anything I can do!" to new parents in the first few weeks, take the initiative. Purchasing a house cleaning service that will show up one day a week is a great way to help out if you can't stop by and unload the dishwasher yourself. Congrats! Cheers to you and your growing family. If you have friends or family who have recently become new parents, chances are you'll want to reach out to congratulate them, show your support, and offer help. However, if they didn't, or you weren't invited to a shower and just want to pick up a gift for someone special, there are many sites out there that allow the parents-to-be register and ask for gifts from multiple stores all in one place. We are so very happy for you! May your newest arrival bring you both joy and happiness. Helping them check a few items off of their to-do list accomplishes exactly that. If you don't live close enough to drop off meals, meal delivery services are another option to help out mom and dad in those first months. MORE FROM LIFE123.COM If any chopping, slicing, or grating is needed, do it ahead of time so all mom and dad have to do is throw everything in a dish and bake. It can also serve as a family keepsake, to remind them of the first few months of their child's life. The site allows new parents to sync registries they already have and create a whole new registry from stores like Target, Walmart, Etsy, IKEA and Disney. Store WebsiteIf you can't find what you're looking for via one of the above sites, go straight to the store's website where the new mom or dad may have registered. Purchasing a year of a diaper service is another way to help out new parents. Having a well-stocked fridge allows them to spend more time on what matters most—bonding with their new baby. It's important to stay hydrated to reduce fatigue, especially when new parents are running low on sleep, and a lemonade or seltzer is a fun alternative to water. If the new parents don't have a meal train set up, consider contacting their friends and family to get one established. Ask them if you can clean their floors, do their laundry, vacuum, or take out their trash and recycling. Again, check the invitation or think about where the new parents-to-be like to shop. If you can't find the kiosk, talk to someone at customer service. Target, Walmart, Ikea and Pottery Barn are some of the popular brick-and-mortar stores for baby registries, according to Today's Parent. Remember to keep your message positive and uplifting—you want them to know you're excited and supportive. That's where the baby registry comes in. To find a registry, all you need to do is enter the name of one of the new parents, and the site should guide you right to their page. Another similar option is the website The Bump. Meal trains are a great way to provide the new parents with a steady supply of meals while ensuring they don't end up with a freezer full of casserole and no fresh fruits or veggies. If all else fails, ask the new parents or their closest family members and friends. You've been invited to a baby shower for a friend, relative or coworker, but you don't know what gift to buy. Nuts, cut fruit and veggies, and prepared sandwiches and wraps that can be eaten with one hand are all great snacks for a breastfeeding mom. Don't Forget HydrationLiquids, such as smoothies, sparkling water and fruit juice, are also great things to bring new parents. Consider buying several pre-prepared meals from Costco or Whole Foods that parents can simply throw in the oven. Consider bringing food that's simple to prepare and eat. Whether they're a family member, close friend, casual acquaintance, or co-worker, your relationship with them should influence the tone of your well wishes. One popular site is Baby List.
